It allows you to update the firmware and other software on a device without having to do a factory reset. If you ever tried to update the software on an older version of iOS, you know that they have to be in DFU mode. Here are a couple of reasons why you need to have the DFU mode on your device, and what you can do with it. Upgrading the firmware on an old device The first reason you need a DFU mode is so that you can update the firmware on an old iPhone. If you still have an iPhone 3G, 3GS or iPhone 4, and you want to upgrade to the latest version of iOS, your iPhone will need to be in DFU mode. Because the firmware for those phones will not be on your device and it will have to go through the update process from scratch. This process can take quite a bit of time. By doing a DFU mode, you will be able to save time. Updating the firmware on other devices A lot of times you will get firmware updates for your computer and Macs. These firmware updates will allow you to have the latest software installed on your computer. But you will still need to use the DFU mode to have it put on your iPhone. This is because there is no way for the firmware to be put on the iPhone itself. It has to come from the computer to your device. Fixing a dying battery The DFU mode is also needed for iPhones that are dying out. If you have ever had a dying
